

Selected Middle School Reading List in Women's Studies: A Resource for Educators

Acknowledgements

This annotated guide was developed to assist teachers in identifying suitable Women's Studies reading material for middle school students. Hard copies are available from the Center for Women's and Gender Studies office. Please contact us if you're interested in obtaining one.

This list of bibliographic references was compiled to introduce the areas of research and teaching represented at the University of Texas. The large number of people who enthusiastically contributed to this project has been particularly rewarding. Special appreciation goes to faculty and students at the Graduate School of Library and Information Science (GSLIS), The University of Texas at Austin. Dr. Barbara Immroth kept our readers well supplied with the most current books, Dr. Irene Owens provided us with annotations, and Drs. Barbara Immroth and Bill Lukenbill encouraged their students to participate. Special appreciation also goes to the many teachers, librarians, and educational specialists who met with us to discuss ways to improve the project and make it accessible to educators and students, to Ruthe Winegarten who welcomed Jessica into her home to use her extensive personal library, and to the RGK Foundation for awarding a grant to partially support the project.

Final preparation of the Middle School Reading List was performed by Jessica McFaddin and Lucia Albino Gilbert, with assistance from many others, including Jill Rader, Kristin Schilt, Melissa Gilbert, Pat Chow, Heather Wait, and Susan Dognaux.
