EDITORIAL DESCRIPTION: The Texas Journal of Women and the Law was established in 1990, fulfilling the vision of our founding members who sought to create a journal that would inspire dialogue about legal, social, and political issues affecting women—their rights, their bodies, their careers, their families.

Our focus has grown to include all areas of gender and law. As students of the law and participants in the evolution of the status of women in society, we share a common interest in discovering and conveying a greater understanding of how gender affects the law and is in turn affected by the law. We realize the extent to which our generation has benefited from the efforts of other feminists, and we strive now to make our contribution to the next generation.
