THEORIES AND METHODS OF FAMILY INTERVENTION

I. SW 393R3: Theories and Methods of Family Intervention

Standardized Course Description: This course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of models and methods of family intervention. The content will include methods for assessment of families and an overview of several different models of family intervention with a focus on intervention skills and techniques. The course is grounded in best practices and the identification, analysis, and implementation of empirically-based intervention strategies. This course will focus on using multiple perspectives in the advanced application of theories, models, and skills utilized in short- and longer-term family interventions.

II. Standardized Course Objectives: By the end of the semester, students will be able to:

1. Compare various theoretical approaches to working with the family as a system, including understanding the impact of the ecological and social environments in which diverse families live;
2. Demonstrate understanding of similarities and differences among theories and critically assess their theoretical perspectives, value bases, and the role of gender in family dynamics;
3. Integrate and demonstrate the differential application of procedures, techniques, and methods of family intervention models that reflect best practices for problem areas or helping diverse client groups;
4. Select theories, models, and interventions and then critically evaluate and analyze these approaches as to their effectiveness in given situations. This includes: (a) the adequacy of the research and knowledge base; (b) the range of applicability; and (c) the value and ethical issues, including the student's own value system;

5. Apply knowledge of the impact of policy and social justice issues to interventions with families of diverse cultures, socioeconomic backgrounds, race/ethnicity, sexual orientation, family structure, national origin, ability, or other manifestation of diversity;
6. Demonstrate skill in using family therapy theory to assess family dysfunction in the context of the larger community and target systems within and outside the family for change;
7. Implement and evaluate the effectiveness of family interventions.

III. Teaching Methods

This class provides opportunities for both theory and skill development. Family practice models will be presented through a combination of lectures, web-based instruction, demonstrations of the practice interventions in each model, and discussions about skills.

IV. Safety Policy

As part of professional social work education, students may have assignments that involve working in agency settings and/or the community. As such, these assignments may present some risks. Sound choices and caution may lower risks inherent to the profession. It is the student's responsibility to be aware of and adhere to policies and practices related to agency and/or community safety. Students should also notify instructors regarding any safety concerns.

VI. Course Requirements

The grade for the course will be based on the student's ability to demonstrate knowledge and methods from evidenced-based models of family therapy and effective interventions for solving family problems. Class attendance, participation, and promptness in completing assignments will be considered when assigning the grade. This is a professional practice class and each student is expected to demonstrate behavior that meets the criteria of the National Association of Social Workers code of ethics and meets the standards for professional practice of social work. Rules for in-class learning include:

VII. Class Code of Conduct:

- * Hard work and commitment to learning topics.
- *Best preparation and dedication to be both a learner and contributor to the in-class learning.
- *Respect for your colleagues, both students and professor, and that includes proper respect given to presentations, comments, and ideas presented during class.
- *Commitment to the class community and personal responsibility to contribute to common good, and to fulfill one's own individual responsibility.
- *Demonstration of outward behavior, dress, speech and mannerism that would suggest that you are a professional person with a professional job.
- *Use your computer, blackberry, and other communication devices in a way to only assist your work in the class you are in at the time.
- *When you need to be late or to take a day off from the class, contact the professor in advance and make appropriate arrangements for making-up your missed in-class learning.

VIII. There are three major assignments:

1. Group Demonstration of evidenced-based practice techniques from the practice approach (20% of your grade). USE ONE OF THE EVIDENCED-BASED TREATMENT MANUALS TO ILLUSTRATE YOUR APPROACH. The class will divide into groups for preparation and presentation of experiential techniques from a treatment approach using a treatment manual from the approach. The treatments to be selected from are: 1)Structural—Minuchin & Aponte, Multisystemic - I suggest using the treatment manual from Patricia Chamberlin or Multisystemic Therapy (Henggler). 2) Strategic Therapy—Use the treatment manual from Jose Szapocznik or Scott Sells' Parenting with Love and Limits program 3) Behavioral Marital—Jacobson and Stuart—Use the treatment manual from Integrative Couples Therapy or John Gottman's marital therapy in your demonstration.

The group will be responsible for demonstrating the treatment techniques for their approach to the class. The group's purpose is to model the specific intervention techniques. Be creative in your presentation. You may ask for audience participation or make use of audio-visual equipment. The use of an outline or handouts explaining or demonstrating the techniques is encouraged.

The presentation is expected to last approximately one hour and consist of an experiential modeling of the treatment techniques and skills for the approach.

As the group progresses in developing the presentation, at least one planning session must be held with the instructor. The group is responsible for scheduling this meeting. I suggest the group meet with me early in the development process. I will assume that all members of each group are sharing the burden of the work. If this is not the case, please notify me. All group members will be assigned the same grade for their presentation, so it should reflect equal responsibility on all members' parts.

2. Paper on Family Therapy Model (40% of your grade). Each group representing the differing approaches will be expected to develop a 20 to 25 page paper on the approach in which they are modeling the techniques. The literature review should concentrate on three main areas: theoretical basis of the model, assessment procedures and treatment techniques used in the model, and research and evidenced-based support for the model. A suggested outline for the literature review is given below.

- I. Theoretical basis of the model, 4 to 6 pages
 - a) Theory
 - b) Key Ideas
 - c) Major Assumptions
- II. Procedures and techniques used in the model, 6 to 8 pages
 - a) Operationalize and specify assessment methods including measures used
 - b) Specify and illustrate techniques used to engage families including processes such as the behaviors of therapists. In addition, talk about stages of the therapy, numbers of sessions, sequences to follow as you deliver the intervention.
 - c) Specify techniques utilized to change families. Make sure you are using techniques from the research-based, practice manuals.
- III. Research and evidenced-based support for the model, 6 to 8 pages
 - a) Research supporting theory of the model or guiding theories. Be specific and quote studies.
 - b) Research supporting clinical effectiveness of the model. What research is available to support the efficacy (outcome) of the model with families? With what specific populations is the model most effective? When should the model be applied to be most effective? Be specific. Review and summarize studies of research effectiveness. Offer a critique of the research that exists.

Considerations in writing your literature review

1. The paper is to be a formal professional product.
2. Write in the third person; avoid using I or we.
3. Rewrite a few times before considering your paper finished.
4. Proofread and correct final copy. Typos, grammar, etc. will be considered in the grade.
5. Adhere to APA Style.
6. Edit for style congruence between members of the group if you work with a group on the paper.

Rules of Conduct for Submitting the Paper as a Group Project

Because this is a large paper the class is permitted to divide into groups (4-5) and to submit one paper for that group. However, if a student chooses she/he may complete their own individual paper. If you do choose to work as a group you must submit a written summary of who did what sections of the paper and verify in this summary that each person contributed equally to the completion of the paper. If the instructor determines from that summary that an individual student did not contribute enough to the paper, that individual's grade may be marked down. Violations in the work ethic and equal contribution to the paper will not be tolerated for any reason. A student who works in a group who does not contribute equally may be asked to complete their own individual paper. You should immediately let the instructor know of any problems that occur with equal participation and that individual will automatically be disqualified from working with a group on the assignment.

Level of Effort Expected for Family Paper

You are expected to go beyond the chapters in the family texts for the class. Do not cite other overview texts or chapters. DO NOT RELY ON THE SEXTON, JANTZEN ET. AL TEXTS OR OTHER SIMILAR OVERVIEW TEXTS, BUT GO BEYOND THESE IN WRITING YOUR PAPER. Go directly to the writings of the progenitors of the models and those trained by them, seminal researchers, and to journal articles. You should concentrate on more recent literature. FOLLOW THE ABOVE OUTLINE.

FAMILY PRACTICE MODEL PAPER IS DUE ONE WEEK AFTER YOUR PRESENTATION

3. Self-Directed Learning Project (40% of your grade): The purpose of this assignment is to learn how to effectively intervene with a specific family problem area and to learn more about how to do effective family practice. The Jantzen et. al. book is helpful for learning best practices for problem areas. There are several options (described below) that will help your learn more about family practices and how to do them. These assignments allow options you may choose for meeting this class requirement. You are also offered an opportunity to construct your own learning task with approval of the instructor. You may also work with one to two partners on this assignment or complete individually following the same guidelines as specified above.

Option One: Well Researched, Evidenced-Based Intervention Manual for Problem Area

Students will select a problem area that impacts couples or families (e.g. battering, adolescent depression, sexual dysfunction, suicide, divorce, blended families, kinship care, etc.) Using the “state of the art” family treatment literature and research on effective interventions for this problem area, students will develop a treatment manual that can guide their practice. A treatment guide or manual is a document that describes to a practitioner how to deliver an intervention. Treatment manuals are specific tools that one can consult in conducting clinical sessions with the client. A treatment manual should provide specific, behaviorally defined steps to follow in working with a client who has a particular problem. For example, how does the practitioner conduct the sessions with the client and what does the practitioner do and say in the sessions.

Students should look to the empirical literature to discover the most effective family treatments and to find guides for how to deliver these treatments.

Option Two: Community Observations, Intervention Manual: Students are encouraged to seek out and learn from community experts who are knowledgeable about how to intervene with a problem. You can partner with an agency or practitioner or volunteer setting. But, make sure the community partners are using the best practices or are experts on the empirically-supported interventions. When possible, interview the practitioners and observe the interventions. Write-up a log of your learning experiences focusing on how to deliver the family interventions. When available, you may also draw from the treatment manuals they use in the agency as well as write-up what you learned from interviews and observations in the agency.

Option Three: Practice Delivering an Evidence-Based Intervention: Identify a Treatment manual for a problem area and seek out an opportunity to deliver at least four sessions from the manual with friends or voluntary clients. This should be done to give you practice with the approach. Write-up the sessions and interventions delivered and what you learned doing this task. If you do not want to write it up and can film yourself doing the sessions that will substitute for the written assignment. Although, you must submit an outline or statement about what intervention you were delivering and reference for that intervention. DVD's submitted must be audible.

Option Four: Master Therapist Analysis: For your learning, film clips of the major treatment approaches covered in this class have been posted on Blackboard. You may watch the film clips that are provided online from Master therapists (there are clips for each practice model studied in the class) and analyze each session that is posted using the analysis sheet provided online. This assignment works best for those who want to learn about the techniques of different practice models in more depth and explore their feelings and reactions about these approaches while watching master therapists in action. The film clips are accessed in the External Links on Black Board. There is also a Master Therapist Analysis Form that you must use to help you analyze what the therapist is doing and what the objectives of the therapy are (the form is posted on Blackboard).

Option Five: Develop Your Own Learning Task Students are encouraged to develop their own learning task with approval of the instructor. The only requirement is that the learning task focuses on mastery of best family practices with a specific population or problem area and/or engages you in learning how to do family practice. BE CREATIVE AND DESIGN YOUR OWN ASSIGNMENT.

IF YOU WISH, YOU CHOOSE A PARTNER TO HELP YOU WITH your self-directed learning assignment. Each partner must make equal contribution. Follow the same rules that have been set for group papers.

Suggestions for Background Work for developing a Well-Researched Intervention Manual

1. Ascertain from the empirical/research literature what are the most effective family interventions for working with your problem area. You can discover this easily by reading reviews of the empirical literature, meta-analyses and other critical analyses of family practices for solving the problem. Choose an intervention based on this analysis. (Start by reading chapter 11 in the Sexton, et. al. book that will provide you some research background. The Jantzen, et. al. book offers research reviews of best, family practices to get you started).
2. Search out available treatment manuals, case studies or other guides that provide specific details on how to deliver the family intervention in a clinical setting.
3. Outline stages or steps to follow in order to help the client.
4. Develop a detailed description for how to conduct one or more sessions of the intervention. Include both the processes and stages of the session as well as the major goals and techniques for the sessions.
5. When appropriate consult experts in this area who may guide you to pre-existing treatment manuals or clarify details of an intervention.

Outline for the Researched, Intervention Manual Paper

- I. Mini Problem Review: In one or two pages summarize the importance of the problem area. Include references.
- II. Research Support for Intervention: In one or two pages summarize the empirical research supporting the use of your intervention. If there are few or little studies say so, and describe the intervention as being in a process of development or experimental stage. Include references.

III. Present your Intervention Manual (12-15 PAGES)

- a. If applicable include detailed overview of stages of the intervention
- b. Include detailed descriptions of how sessions are conducted.
- c. Include examples of forms, exercises, and other aids used to facilitate change. Include sources on all forms typed on the forms.

IV. Include one or more case examples from literature to illustrate steps and processes of the intervention. This can be included as an appendix.
